

To open media ownership of multiple media platforms is limiting the right to free speech and confining the already too censored news reporting to the opinions of the corporate few. It is corporate America that is pulling this country into the depths of bankruptcy of not only trying to take away more jobs, but literally robbing this country of it's soul. The vast majority of our citizens aren't even aware of the FCC's proposed deregulation of the media thanks to the already limited coverage given by corporate owned media, and now you want to even lessen the information commuted to the general public? I stand with Michael Copps, Jonathan Adelstein, Journalism Professor, Robert Jensen, Senator Russ Feingold, and all the others in favor of postponing the vote on this issue until the public is more informed on the consequences of deregulations.
